Once the Character is exported to the Game, it will be up to the GM of that game to set it up for the player(showing it in the N Journal and giving control over it). All Access Vault This is the premium level of vault access. For example, if you purchase "Lost Mine of Phandelver"(Market), all games you create with that module will have the "All Access Vault unlocked", even if the game creator does not have a Plusinfo or Proinfo subscription. You'll be presented with a list of eligible Games to export the Character to. If the game creator does not have a subscription, the game will have the default Limited Vault level. The Vault is also useful for GMs to store pre-generated Player Characters that they may want to share in multiple games, or a number of interesting NPCs, monsters, spaceships etc. You are a player in the game, and the GM has expressly turned on the "Allow Players to Import Characters"-setting on the Game Settings-page: If you are Plusinfo/Proinfo-subscriber, or the Game Creator is a Plusinfo/Proinfo-subscriber If both you and the Game Creator are free users, but the game is created with a marketplace module that have Full Access If you are a free user, the game must also have All Access Vault enabled (see below for more information on Vault Access Levels.) If a Game you want to export a Character to isn't showing up in the list, be sure that one of those criteria are met, and then reload the page. If you want to import an "updated" version of a Character, just delete the existing Character from your vault, and re-import it from the Game. The level of a game is determined by the subscription level of the game creator's account. Importing Characters is easy -- just click the "Import Character" button on your Character Vault page. After you One game in, you will see a list of characters that you have permission to edit. Example of the character vault of a person with two characters, where the second character has a portrait and a token attached. The process may take several seconds to complete. Note that once a character is in your vault, it is stored as a "snapshot", which means that it will no longer be updated or receive changes from the game it came from. Exporting a character for a game note you can only export characters for games where: 1. Simply choose the character you want to import and press the "Import Characters" button. Definition: "Importing character" here refers to importing a character sheet into your "export character" character. Here refers to exporting a character sheet from your Character Vault, for a game the information that is saved with the sheet. Large Character Avatar and Token View Game Information The character is exported from the character sheet used and all statistics saved. The game's GMS can also import characters (or NPCs, monsters, etc.) into the game. If the creator of the game has a subscription, the game will have a vault level of all access. However, if you are a player in the game, you must have permission to edit the character in order to import it into your vault. In addition, the selected modules (most, if not all) display the vault level of all accesses for all games based on that module (as indicated at the bottom of their details page). page).
